

Student's Name

Professor

Course

Date

Score 94.1

[Comment:] Personal narrative. Document formatting is very good, but there is room for improvement. Document formatting issues: font control. [Observations:] {Integrity}: 100%. {Length}: 100%. {Mechanics:} 100% (spelling 100%, grammar 100%, punctuation 100%, word choice 100%). {Citation formatting:} ungraded. {Reasoning, logic:} 86% (efficiency 100%, acuity 85%, clarity 99%, objectivity 59%).

Personal Narrative

If you want something, you can make it happen. My parents have instilled these words in me since I was young. My parents have enabled my sister and me to travel to more than five countries since I was born. The traveling expenses have been met from my father's pocket. I have learned several languages, met new people, and seen beautiful places, all of which have enabled me to enjoy my life with my parents. It is worth noting that my family is not rich, nor have they won the lottery or have some schemes that my parents get resources to finance our traveling abroad. Still, through their hard work and sacrifices, they made traveling possible. I am grateful to them for all that they have done for me to see the beauty of the world, as narrated below.

As a child, my parents took me to various countries during holidays. I still remember these travel experiences, including traveling to South Island, New Zealand, when I was four years old, which surprised my mother, who could not believe I know a lot about it up to now. At the age of 7, we traveled to Canada with my mom and dad, and this was when my traveling interest was sparked. As a result, traveling has always been a passion of mine, and even when we weren't traveling far, my parents allowed me to explore the world around us. As such, I have had a fantastic experience; memories that will last a lifetime.

When I was 12, we traveled to four countries with my mom in two weeks; Poland, Russia, Vietnam, and South Africa. Among these countries, the most outstanding one is South Africa, where we visited various national parks and reserves. It was my first time seeing the lion, the jungle king. I had heard many stories about how brave, strong, and dangerous the lion was, and now was my chance to see it in action. I saw a lot of wild animals, like leopards, cheetahs, buffalo, and hyenas. I would see lions hunting buffaloes in the river, and I was shocked that a lion could easily kill a massive animal like a buffalo. Such an adventure was unlike anything I had ever seen on television.

For my parents, traveling and seeing the world do not seem to end. Last year, my father and mom took us on vacation to Australia. I wondered why they chose this country abruptly without having it in our schedule and discussed it as a family as we usually do. However, I later learned they were doing so to remember their 40 years of marriage because it is where they visited first after settling down in marriage. As such, my parents continue to inspire me to utilize travel opportunities.

At the moment, I plan to follow in my parent's footsteps. I need to see what I feel like seeing in this world because my parents instilled in me a curiosity about places, other cultures, and people. They also taught me to try new things and go for them at whatever cost, as long as I wanted them. They have also supported me unfailingly through the travels I have experienced. As a result, I am grateful to my parents for showing me the way. While people are looking for blogs about their travel experiences, I have my parents, who are pretty cool with it.