

Last Name

Student's Name

Professor's Name

Institution

Date

Score 83.4

[Comment:] No formal writing style indicated. Document formatting is good, but there is room for improvement.

Document formatting issues: vertical spacing; horizontal spacing; body header; page header; font control.

[Observations:] {Integrity}: 100%. {Length}: 100%.

{Mechanics}: 97% (spelling 100%, grammar 100%, punctuation 99%, word choice 90%). {Citation formatting:}

ungraded. {Reasoning, logic:} 70% (efficiency 51%, acuity 87%, clarity 67%, objectivity 77%).

Personal essay

Gratitude is a feeling of appreciation for something that has been done or received. It is a powerful emotion that can have a positive impact on both the giver and the receiver. When we express gratitude, we are not only acknowledging the good things in our lives, but we are also strengthening the relationships that we have with others.

I have always been a grateful person. I grew up in a small town where everyone knew everyone else, and there was a strong sense of community. My parents always taught me to be thankful for what I had, and I learned the importance of helping others.

One of the most important lessons I learned about gratitude came from my grandfather. He was a kind and generous man who always went out of his way to help others. He taught me that it is important to give back, and that even the smallest act of kindness can make a big difference.

One day, when I was about 10 years old, my grandfather took me to the grocery store. We were walking down the aisle when we saw a woman with several small children. She was struggling to carry all of her groceries, and her children were starting to get restless. My grandfather went over to her and offered to help her carry her groceries to her car. The woman was very grateful, and she told my grandfather that he was a kind man.

I was so proud of my grandfather for helping that woman. I realized that even though he was a simple man, he had a big heart. He taught me that it doesn't take much to make a difference in someone's life, and that the smallest act of kindness can be the most meaningful.

I have carried my grandfather's lesson with me throughout my life. I am always looking for ways to help others, and I am always grateful for the good things in my life. I know that gratitude is a powerful emotion, and I believe that it can make the world a better place.

One of the most recent examples of my gratitude came when I was in college. I was struggling to pay my tuition, and I didn't know what I was going to do. I was about to give up when I received a letter in the mail from an anonymous donor. The letter said that the donor had been following my progress in school, and they wanted to help me pay my tuition. I was so grateful for this act of kindness, and I know that it would not have been possible without the generosity of the donor.

I am so grateful for the many people in my life who have shown me the importance of gratitude. I am grateful for my parents, who taught me to be thankful for what I have. I am grateful for my grandfather, who showed me that even the smallest act of kindness can make a big difference. I am grateful for the anonymous donor, who helped me pay my tuition. I am grateful for all of the good things in my life, and I know that I am a better person because of them.

I hope that my story will inspire others to be more grateful. Gratitude is a powerful emotion that can have a positive impact on our lives. When we express gratitude, we are not only acknowledging the good things in our lives, but we are also strengthening the relationships that we have with others. We are also making the world a better place.